Find the right table. Yes, even your table surface needs to be perfect! Use a table or desk that is the right height. You need to feel comfortable and natural, not cramped and hunched over. Should you need to stretch your legs, you need to be able to. Ensure the table is steady, safe, and doesn't buckle. A slight tremor on the table surface on your side will look like an earthquake to your audience! Or imagine slightly pressing down on one side of the table and seeing the entire surface, with your laptop, crashing to the floor! Avoid glass tables – this might allow your interviewer(s) to see your shaking legs, or cause a glare from the laptop screen. And make sure the surface is spotless. Lastly, keep away from tablecloths. Nothing kills a professional mood as swiftly as a picnic-and-butterflies patterned tablecloth.
